1a Non-notation of the genitive may be triggered by special factors, e.g. the names in -i-jo, which would let expect a genitive †i-jo-jo, whence i-jo- by hapology.

Wrong explanations: -o old ablative /- $\bar{o}d$ /?* (Duhoux 2008 after others).

1b surely wrong: -(C)o like Hitt. -aš, or Celtib. -o? different genitive endings with different functions in Indo-European ???!

Hitt. -aš: also outcome of gen.sg. - $\bar{e}h_2$ -es* (or earlier - $\bar{e}h_2$ -s*) after the merging of the inherited -o-* and - $\bar{e}h_2$ -*: h $\bar{a}šša$ - ‘hearth, fire-place’ (: lat. āra ‘id.’), ^{GIS}h $\bar{i}šša$ - ‘carriage pole’

Hispan.-Celt. -o /- \bar{o} / is an innovation that cannot even be traced back to Continental Celtic.
